

ABSTRACT

- A system, for collecting data through the Internet, that is characterized by the inclusion of a means for producing or arranging personal-life information/advice in a question-and-answer format that includes a plurality of questions for obtaining desired data requested by a business-user or other organization-user (hereinafter "business-user"); a means for supplying personal-life information/advice to an individual user, who can receive such information at any time; a means for selecting the aforementioned desired data from the user's answers to a plurality of questions; and a means for supplying to the business-users the data that they desire.